

Book Activities for families

Book Activities for families

Book Activities for families

- Have both you and your child illustrate the most important part of the story. How were your responses alike? How were they different?
- Identify 3-5 new words from the text. Create an illustration of their meaning to display in your home.
- Visit your local library to check out more books by the same author or on the same topic.
- Act out the beginning, middle, or end of well known stories you've shared for a fun game of Story Charades.*
- Who Am I? Choose one of your child's favorite book characters, then describe his or her personality traits, problems, and physical descriptions until she guesses the character's identity.*
- Have your child share a book with relatives through a video conferencing technology platform such as Zoom or FaceTime.*

- Have both you and your child illustrate the most important part of the story. How were your responses alike? How were they different?
- Identify 3-5 new words from the text. Create an illustration of their meaning to display in your home.
- Visit your local library to check out more books by the same author or on the same topic.
- Act out the beginning, middle, or end of well known stories you've shared for a fun game of Story Charades.*
- Who Am I? Choose one of your child's favorite book characters, then describe his or her personality traits, problems, and physical descriptions until she guesses the character's identity.*
- Have your child share a book with relatives through a video conferencing technology platform such as Zoom or FaceTime.*

- Have both you and your child illustrate the most important part of the story. How were your responses alike? How were they different?
- Identify 3-5 new words from the text. Create an illustration of their meaning to display in your home.
- Visit your local library to check out more books by the same author or on the same topic.
- Act out the beginning, middle, or end of well known stories you've shared for a fun game of Story Charades.*
- Who Am I? Choose one of your child's favorite book characters, then describe his or her personality traits, problems, and physical descriptions until she guesses the character's identity.*
- Have your child share a book with relatives through a video conferencing technology platform such as Zoom or FaceTime.*

© Collaborative for Teaching and Learning

© Collaborative for Teaching and Learning

© Collaborative for Teaching and Learning

*Adapted from Scholastic.com

*Adapted from Scholastic.com

*Adapted from Scholastic.com