

CONTENT LITERACY CONSULTANT
Collaborative for Teaching and Learning

The Collaborative for Teaching and Learning (CTL), a non-profit Louisville-based education agency, is seeking candidates for part-time Content Literacy Consultant positions. The candidate must have:

- Master's degree, and a proven record of success as a teacher in middle and/or high school classrooms
- Certification in a core academic discipline; Social Studies or Science preferred
- Experience in creating high quality, student-centered teaching and learning environments in both classroom and professional development settings
- Demonstrated leadership in working with educators to improve classroom practice
- Applied understanding of current educational research about best practices as it pertains to content literacy
- Excellent written and oral communication skills
- Commitment to collaboration and teamwork in planning and development
- Personal commitment to self-reflective practice and on-going professional development

Candidates with leadership experience at the team, departmental, building, or district level are strongly encouraged to apply. Some statewide travel will be required.

Screening of candidates will begin after October 1, 2023, and will continue until the position is filled.

Salary commensurate with experience.

Interested applicants are encouraged to contact CTL to discuss the position at seddleman@ctlonline.org or (502) 895-9500, ext 330. Applicants should submit a letter of application, resume, writing sample and references to:

Content Literacy Consultant Search Committee
c/o Staci Eddleman, Director of Programming
Collaborative for Teaching and Learning
2303 River Road, Suite 100
Louisville, Kentucky 40206

The Collaborative for Teaching and Learning is an Equal Opportunity Employer. Minority applicants are urged to apply.